First Baptist Church in Vacaville Builds a Place for Kids

Shirley Swan, Administrator for First Baptist Church in Vacaville, can't stop looking out the door to see what is happening next as construction progresses on the new multipurpose room Hearn Construction is building. The church has been working toward their vision of a new building to be used for youth and family ministry for eleven years. She says, "We want to provide a place for kids to do constructive activities." First Baptist Youth Programs now serve more than 100 kids, teens and their families, but they have been using other facilities, such as the Vacaville Christian School Gym, to accommodate their activities. They are excited to build this new tool for community service in Vacaville, which will give them 11,500 square feet for activities such as family game nights and the annual Harvest Carnival .

Hearn's Preconstruction Program Helps Church Realize Eleven Year Dream

Hearn Construction has been working with First Baptist and local architect Tom Bouffard throughout their design and preconstruction process to help the church develop a building that will meet both the needs of their ministry and their budget. Constructability reviews and value engineering are two of the valuable services Hearn's Preconstruction Department provides to many projects seeking to increase efficiencies in their building process. Shirley says, "Hearn is like a family who has partnered with us to get this job done." Hearn is committed to the community and honored to participate in its physical and spiritual growth. Project Manager Deanna Bohler and Superintendent Phillip Wortham will be building the project under the supervision of Dave Dosker.
